Some Very Stubborn Facts.

In regard to prohibition the question is not what are the evils of intemperance; it is whether any form of prohibition does good or harm—diminishes the amount of drunkenness, or increases it, and the answer to this question is not a matter of conjecture or speculation. The experiment has been tried by many communities, on an ample field, for a sufficient time, under favorable conditions, and with a decisive result.

Massachusetts tried prohibition for many years, and gave it up as worse than a failure. The Joint Committee of the Legislature in 1867 reports that if the law diminishes the number of open places for drinking it does so only to multiply the secret places. The evidence shows that in all those cities or towns where the prosecution against open places was most active an extraordinary number of secret places were started, that more liquor and worse liquor was drunk, and that secret intoxication ensued.

With regard to Boston, the report says "It can be safely asserted that while the number of open places has somewhat diminished, an immense and continually increasing number of secret places and clubs have been established, drunkenness has increased almost in direct ratio with the closing of public places, and there is now more of it than at any previous time in the history of the city."

Ex-Mayor Norcross is authority for the statement that drunkenness increased, and ex-Mayor Lincoln said that "the sale of ardent spirits has increased faster than the population in increased."

From Cambridge, Lowell, Charleston, New Bedford, Fall River, Worcester, Lynn, Springfield, Pittsfield, comes similar evidence given by mayors and ex-mayors, and from competent persons. "The fact," says the report, "that the place is secret takes away the restraint which, in more public and respectable places, would keep the drunkard within temperate bounds. The fact that the place is contraband and liable to interruption and its gains are hazardous, tends to drive honest men from it, and leave it in control of men who will not scruple to poison the community with vile adulterations."

community with vile adulterations."

The failure of prohibition as a means of checking drunkenness, is shown by figures collected by the Massachusetts State Bureau of Statistics of Labor, under the direction of Carroll D. Wright, now U. S. Labor Commissioner, and by order of the Legislature. All the figures which follow are official. In the table below are given the statistics of drunkenness for the entire State for ten years, with the convictions and sentences. During the five years prohibition was in force, and in the last five a license system:

PROHIBITION.
Year	Arrests	Convictions	Sentences
1870..	27,890	19,323	18,880
1871..	28,853	20,581	20,383
1872..	29,258	23,886	23,587
1873..	29,761	24,106	23,842
1874..	31,931	22,943	22,748

LICENSE.
Year	Arrests	Convictions	Sentences
1875..	29,682	24,198	21,553
1876..	26,654	19,584	18,106
1877..	26,012	18,898	17,614
1878..	24,956	17,581	16,795
1879..	25,716	17,571	18,212

Total.
147,693	110,839	109,440

This little table tells the whole story of prohibition failure in Massachusetts. It shows that notwithstanding the increase of population in the last or license half of the decade over the first, or prohibition half, there were 14,673 less arrests for drunkenness, 13,007 less convictions, and 17,160 less sentences. Comparing 1874, the last year of prohibition, with 1876, when the license system had been fully established again, it is found that there were 5,277 fewer arrests in the latter year, 3,359 fewer convictions, and 4,642 fewer sentences.

The statistics by cities and towns are equally instructive. Comparing the number of arrests in two years of prohibition, 1870 and 1874, and in one high license, after the system had been in force five years, and notwithstanding the large increase in population it is found that in most of the places there was a large decrease in the number of arrests in 1879, compared with 1870.

The court statistics of liquor cases show that the courts have more to do under prohibition than under license. Thus disproving the arguments of the Prohibitionists that if the sale of liquor were absolutely forbidden, there would be little for the courts to do, and that the cost of machinery of justice would be wonderfully lessened. Such was not Massachusetts' experience.

How To Stop It.

The Anti-Saloon League points with pride to more than 50,000 pledges of total abstinence obtained in Iowa during the past year. That, after all would seem to be the most practicable and the most satisfactory manner of proceeding to wipe out the liquor traffic. If nobody buys, there will be nobody to sell. If the vast majority of the people of Iowa ever become members of that league or give the league their signatures, the great problem will have been solved without invoking the aid of any state marshals or other officials, without calling into assistance courts and legislatures, without arousing opposition and without calling hard names or growing warm under the collar. And after all, if the evil is ever wiped out, the first requisite is that the great majority abstain from the use of liquors before they seek to enforce a law, which they would compel others to obey while they evade it.

There would not be a saloon, a brewery, a wholesale liquor house, a booze drug store or a bootlegger in Iowa if there were not a lively demand for the goods dispensed at these places. And in the discussion of this problem it should be borne in mind that the person who wants to drink, invariably hunts up the man who has the stuff for sale. The citizens may be bothered by canvassers for all other good or bad things, but when he wants poison of this sort, he goes out and hunts for it. And if there were none or but very few to hunt for it, there would be no one who would bother with handling the stuff and the search would be in vain. Just stop the demand and the supply will vanish.—Burlington, Iowa, Hawkeye.

Republicans Win A Victory.

The Court of Appeals Wednesday declared that the legislative redistricting act passed by the last Legislature is unconstitutional and void.

After the passage of this act by the last legislature the Republicans brought suit to test its validity in the Butler county and Ohio county circuit courts. The cases are joined in the opinion of the court, which upholds the contention of the Republicans that this act is in contravention of Section 25 of the Constitution, in that more than two counties are joined together to form a legislative district, but that the districts so formed are grossly unequal both in population and area.

Jerome Springs A Surprise.

District Attorney Jerome sprang a surprise Wednesday by declaring his belief that Harry K. Thaw is insane. He did not make formal application for a lunacy commission, but appealed in an impassioned speech to the conscience of the court. Justice Fitzgerald, after hearing Mr. Jerome, dismissed the jury until this morning and adjourned court until 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon, when he will decide whether the trial shall go on or a commission shall be appointed to pass upon Thaw's mental condition. In his address to the court Mr. Jerome accused the defense attorneys of concealing evidence and said he would call the matter to the attention of the Appellate division of the Supreme Court.

Would Welcome Alliance.

That the peace of the world might be insured Mr. Claude Johnson, of London, now in Lexington on a visit, says the English people would welcome an alliance with the United States. This alliance, he says, will come in time, but at present the American people are too much imbued with the spirit of commercialism to consider it. In regard to the General Swettenham incident Mr. Johnson says the English people were far more chagrined than the Americans, and the English press, in apologizing for Swettenham's conduct, based their editorials on the fact that any country might be unfortunate enough to "sometimes have a fool for an officer." Mr. Johnson was formerly Mayor of Lexington, but is now manager in England for one of the large American industries.

Boys Badly Disappointed.

Two small boys appeared at the gates of the Eastern Kentucky Asylum for the insane at Lexington late Wednesday evening, and stated that they had come to visit their father, who was an inmate of the asylum. They gave their names as Willie and Frank Rhoden, twelve and fifteen years old, of Euclid, Greenup county, and said that their father's name was E. S. Rhoden, and that he had been sent to the asylum several years ago. An examination of the books, however, revealed that E. S. Rhoden had escaped in April, 1905, and had never been captured. He had previously been confined in the asylum, and as soon as he escaped the officials notified his wife. In response, she wrote that the fugitive had probably gone to Tennessee, where he had relatives.

The boys were much distressed when they found that their father had gone from the asylum, and said their mother had told them nothing of his having escaped. They said they had longed to see their father ever since he had gone from home, and that finally the sympathetic people in the little town of Euclid had raised the money for them to pay their railroad fare to Lexington. The lads were turned over to Juvenile Officer J. B. Byall, who will take care of them until steps can be taken to send them back to their home.

Roosevelt Has "Universe By The Tail."

In a discourse before the Secular League of Washington City, the other night, Dr. William A. Croffutt spoke of the visit of New York clergymen to the White House recently and of their informing the President of the decline of religion and the rise of atheism in that city, and enlisting his aid. Dr. Croffutt stated he was glad the people of New York were getting rid of some of their radical ideas, but he said that it was probably due to the falling off of the church revenues that bothered the reverend gentlemen more than the salvation of souls.

"That's about the best thing they could do; to call on the President," said Dr. Croffutt. "The man in the White House, who's got the universe by the tail, can do anything for the benefit of the human race if it can be accomplished by the power of his tongue. I am glad the President has a thousand times more confidence in himself than he has in the Almighty, and I think we may be duty grateful that we have a man who can accomplish anything with a frown or a proclamation. The President, I have no doubt will issue a special message on the subject, and remedy the trouble and re-establish religion in New York to its proper place."

"The Player Maid."

An exceptional theatrical event will occur at the Paris Grand next Monday night when Florence Davis, supported by Elliott Dexter and a strong company, will present the very funny comedy, "The Player Maid." This play comes to us proclaimed to be the reigning comedy success, and if the press of leading cities is to be relied upon, there is a treat in store for theatre-goers, as Miss Davis had her company have been showered with praise by critics where "The Player Maid" has been presented. The Richmond News-Leader, of October 21st, has the following to say: "This vivacious kinswoman of the late President Davis is flashing brilliancy as a star. She made an undoubted hit at the Academy last night. Miss Davis has a piquant, hearty and gracious manner, an artful play of countenance, liveliness of wit and alertness of action, which makes her particularly attractive from the moment she appears."

This excerpt is but one of the many favorable comments from leading dramatic critics. Bristling with wit, replete with funny situations, elegant costumes, elaborate scenic effects and with its talented star, "The Player Maid" will no doubt test the capacity of the Grand.

The performance is to be given under the auspices of Richard Hawes Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, and the ladies are working hard to insure a large audience. The Confederate Veterans have been invited to attend in a body as her guests and have accepted the invitation.

Winter Broken.

If the old adage is true that a thunderstorm in March presages that winter is broken and spring is knocking at the door, there will be no occasion for complaint because of the thunderstorms last week and the accompanying heavy downpours.

H. F. Hillenmeyer, the well-known nurseryman, who keeps tab on the weather with the precision of a scientist, says there was a heavy rain in this section on March 12 a year ago. On the following day, however, he says it began sleeting and snowing, and for ten days or two weeks real winter weather prevailed. Farmers, he says, had begun plowing and the snow the ice stopped the plow. Mr. Hillenmeyer added: "Farmers are in better fix now at this time than they were last year, and if the March thunderstorm is a reliable harbinger, they may expect an early spring."

Panic Of The Financiers.

With J. Pierpont Morgan's special visit to the President to insist that the officials of the Eastern railroads be allowed to present the railroads needs and Mr. Harriman lurking around the White House ready to break in at any minute, unless Secretary Loeb and the secret service men can keep him out, there is something doing in Washington. What President Roosevelt can do is not at all clear. What kind of a treaty of peace can be patched up to help the railroads defeat two cent passenger fare and other anti-railroad legislation in most of the States is a dark problem. The reformers in the States evidently want to show the President that they can do much more to curb unreasonable rates than he has accomplished through Federal legislation.

How can President Roosevelt, if he would, restrain his fellow reformers in the several States? Or what can he do to lessen the strain on the railroad magnates in the interstate field? Unless he is willing to order the Interstate Commerce Commission to stop business and that he can hardly do, for they are sworn to carry out the law without fear or favor. The railroad magnates are not united on a plan of action and do not seem to be pulling together.

Mr. Morgan evidently judges there is trouble ahead and Mr. Stickney predicts a panic, but Mr. Harriman seems to think that the worst of the storm is over, for he says: "We feel that we are now—all of us—the public, the government and the railways on a common ground where we can deal with each other in the right spirit." That is very condescending of Mr. Harriman and no doubt President Roosevelt will be anxious to "deal" with the railroad magnates, "in the right spirit" if he deals with them at all.

The Wall street high financiers find little comfort from public opinion their theory that the public are fat geese and can be constantly plucked without much squawking has been rudely disturbed by events and their bad, if not dishonest financial management has made investors shy of railroad securities. Hence, the panic, not of the public, but of the financiers.

Has The South Been Buncoed?

The interpretation of the new immigration act by Attorney General Bonaparte puts a virtual veto on immigration to the Southern States as far as organization effort to aid it is concerned, without a radical modification of methods.

The members of the Senate from the Southern States foresaw this and were opposed to the immigration bill and had the power to defeat it, until they were assured "from a high source," that the Administration would continue the new law in favor of assisted immigration in accordance with the decision rendered by Secretary Straus in the South Carolina case. Who gave this assurance has not yet been revealed, but to satisfy those Senators they were safe in allowing the bill to become a law, it is certain they must have received assurance from an authoritative source for they would not have withdrawn their opposition to the bill on mere rumor.

Thus the South strikes a snag it is difficult to overcome and is buncoed at present out of the immigration she needs to increase her manufacturing and farming interests. Immigrants do not naturally go South for all the lines of transportation on the ocean lead to Northern ports and the railroads point mostly to the West. The foreigners that come to our shores know nothing of the South as all their information is either by what their friends already in this country tell them or through the advertising matter distributed by the steamship lines. If a small stream of immigration could be turned to the Southern States, it would become a torrent, for the greater advantages of the South in the matter of opportunity and climate when known and the comparative cheap price of land would appeal to those from Southern Europe seeking new homes. But the vast advantages of the South for immigrants cannot long be hid under a bushel either by the intrigue of Republican politicians or the machinations of rival manufacturing interests in other States.

People With Peculiar Fads.

What is a fad? Some people think it is a mania while others call it a useful occupation of idle moments. There once was a girl whose fad was the collecting of silver spoons that belonged to other people and another whose fad was the saving of champagne corks. It is question which was the least pleasing. Many people have fads that are really elevating. There is a rich Englishman of title, for instance, who boasts that he has the largest collection of butterflies in the world, and many are the men of wealth, who make their fad the collection of rare diamonds, old paintings, or antique furniture. J. Pierpont Morgan, for instance, it is said will buy anything of any kind that is old or valuable. President Roosevelt's fad is athletics and race suicide. King Edward has a fad for fine horses and racing. Emperor William changes his fad every month or so. Gen. Grant had few enjoyments and few fads. It has been said of him that he liked a fast horse better than anything in the world. One day, while he was out driving, behind a particularly speedy horse that was his especial pride, a butcher boy driving a shaggy little pony, hitched to a delivery wagon, beat him with ease. Those who know the man believe the statement that he never rested content until he succeeded in buying the horse from the butcher. If all the anecdotes that have been credited to Lincoln, really emanated from him, his fad must have been story-telling.

A great many people of ordinary means have fads for the collection of postage stamps and coins. Though they appear "harmless" these fads cost a great deal of money and there is an instance on record where a man starved himself to death rather than part with any of his precious collections of coins. There are really very few collections of coins that are really worth anything except to the collector.

Most collections are composed of a number of coins that are worth only two or three cents above their face value.

Tobacco Trust Showing Its Teeth

Printed circulars, signed with the facsimile signature of Ben Marshall, Clerk of the Franklin County Circuit Court, containing an announcement of the Court of Appeals' recent affirmation of the judgment of the Trimble County Circuit Court, assessing a fine of $2,000 against the International Harvester Company for violation of the state anti-trust act, and also containing a copy of the section of the Kentucky statutes, which prohibits any corporation, person or association from becoming a party to any pool or agreement to fix the price of any article or commodity under penalty of $500 to $5,000 fine, have been mailed in sealed envelopes to almost every farmer and tobacco grower in Woodford county.

Coming at a time when the Society of Equity is engaged in securing pledges of the 1907 tobacco crops and immediately following the decision of Special Judge Marshall, of the Woodford Circuit Court, holding to be valid the act of 1906, authorizing Kentucky farmers to pool their crops, the recipients of these circulars believe them to be an attempt to intimidate them and prevent them from signing their 1907 crops to the pool. Great indignation is felt over the matter not only in Woodford county but neighboring counties.

It simply shows the effect the tobacco pool is having on the tobacco trust, and by the trust showing its teeth in this manner should convince the farmer and grower that their efforts are being felt and they should not hesitate for a moment in signing their 1907 crops.

The National Sport.

In a few short weeks the raucous voice of the umpire, the resonant shouts of the "fans," the dull thud of the bat and the hysterical admonitions of the coach will be heard in the land, and the great national game will be on in full swing. Every corner lot, every side street and every commons will present its opposing teams, and instead of asking about the fate of nations or the opening and closing market quotations, Americans, from the minister to the peanut vendor on the corner will be asking "What's the score?" Baseball is the national game. Everybody likes it, and everybody either has played it, will play it or wants to play it. Fortunately for the American youth baseball has escaped much that has brought other athletic sports into disrepute. It has been kept comparatively clean. It is a game of skill and muscle and head work. It trains the eye, develops the brain, strengthens the muscle and rests the mind. It is the king of sports, and the sure harbinger of spring. There is something wrong about the mind or digestion of the man who does not like to see a good game of base ball.

Isn't This Town
A Pretty Good Town?
If Not, Why Not?

How do you like the town you live in? Pretty fair sort of place, isn't it? Otherwise you'd move to some other town, wouldn't you?

But you don't think much of this town, you say? Well, what's the matter with this town? If there's anything wrong, let's all get together and right it.

All of us live here, and we ought to pull together. Nobody living in New York or Chicago or St. Louis or San Francisco is going to do any pulling FOR us.

On the contrary, some of those cities are doing a lot of pulling FROM us. They not only pull away some of our best young men as the boys grow up, but they pull away many of our good American dollars, which ought to be spent right here, where they would do the most good.

What is your favorite book? The Mail Order Catalogue? Ah, so we thought!

Now suppose, just for a change, you read your local paper carefully, watch the advertisements, and if you don't see what you want ask the home merchant for it. Suppose all of us trade at home a little more regularly. That ought to help make this a better town.

And maybe if we'd keep more of our money at home to build up the town we'd keep more of our boys at home.

A Freshman.

A freshman who had entered one of the large universities and was not much accustomed to the ways either of institutions of learning or of cities was returning late one evening from a lecture. When near his lodgings he was halted by two masked men, who "held him up" in true metropolitan style. One of the men leveled the conventional revolver at the young man, while the other relieved him of his watch, pocketbook and other valuables. He made no mention of the matter to anybody at the time, but a few days later he reported it to the president of the university.

"It wasn't a great deal," he said, "but it was more than I like to lose, and I think it's an outrage to treat a boy that way."

"Why didn't you tell me of this sooner?" asked the president.

"I supposed they would bring the things back to me next morning," he answered. "It was a couple of sophomores hazing me, wasn't it?"—Youth's Companion.

Weary Watches.

"I suppose," said the watchmaker, "you do not know that watches, like human beings, sometimes don't go for the very good reason that they are tired. Sometimes a watch is brought to me which is all right. Nothing about it is out of order, and it is fairly clean. When it becomes sulky and refuses to go except by fits and starts the best thing to do is to lay it aside and give it a rest. The mechanism in a 'tired' watch seems to be in perfect condition, but it won't work. The fact is that long and faithful service has thrown it slightly out of adjustment in perhaps ten different places. Scraping and cleaning and readjusting a fine watch is the worst thing that could be done to it. A month's rest will instead cause the works slowly to readjust themselves, and at the end of that time after careful oiling the watch will go as cheerfully as ever."—Washington Star.

Big Game Birds.

The capercaillie, or "black game bird of Norway," is one of the largest species of game birds in the world, being very hardy and frequently attaining a weight exceeding fifteen pounds, but when the birds are young they are easy prey of hawks. The birds are what are known as "rangers" for the reason that while in quest of food they cover a wide expanse of territory. During periods of heavy snowfall they burrow into the snow and remain until the storm subsides before venturing out again. Their food in winter consists chiefly of birch buds, and in summer they catch mice and other small animals. They are rated as members of the grouse family and in habits are much like the partridge.—Forest and Stream.

Patti's First Audience.

Adelina Patti once gave the following account of her first audience: At six years of age I was a prima donna of the nursery. When I had been put to bed on my return home with my father and mother from the opera I used to make sure that they and the rest of the family were asleep, and then I would hop out from beneath the counterpane and fancy myself a great cantatrice, bowing before the plaudits of a huge audience. I admit my audience was a little apathetic, but, after all, that is not to be wondered at, for they were only a row of dolls which I had ranged on chairs before me.

In Doubt.

On a famous rifle range there was an important team match one day, and the men were firing in pairs, one for each team, side by side. The best shot on the home team was given to aiming so long that bets were made on whether or not he had gone to sleep at the firing point. Presently he withdrew his head from the stock of his rifle, lowered the barrel and asked his opponent in a low voice:

"Did I fire or did you?"—Forest and Stream.

Work and Fatigue.

What fatigues the motive power is getting to work. Once the mind is fascinated and the field of consciousness restricted to a single object the brain works without exhausting itself. Let us apply ourselves for a good time to whatever we do and have several hours of sustained labor. By quitting the task to dream, to smoke a cigarette or to watch a fly one becomes exhausted.—Paris Revue.

Might Have Made a Killing.

A physician took it into his head to go rabbit shooting. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon he returned, tired out and empty handed, telling his wife that he hadn't killed a thing. Thereupon she remarked: "I told you so. If you had stayed at home and attended to your legitimate business you might have been more successful."—Chicago News.

Sweetly Said.

The influence of locality upon speech is illustrated by a reply received from a Vermont farmer and quoted in the Boston Herald. The old man had been questioned in regard to the value of an estate left by one of his neighbors. "Waal," said he, with great deliberation, "we call 'at he'll sugar off about $50,000."

No Wedding Bells For Him.

Weary Willie (reading "ad.")—Ma wanted to chop wood, bring up coal, tend furnace, take care of garden, mind chickens and children. Frayed fagin (groaning)—Gee! Dem matrimonial advertisements make me tired.—Judge.

Between friends frequent reproaches make the friendship distant.—Confucius.

SEEKING SUPPORT FROM BIG GUNS IN WASHINGTON.Chairman Ernst Laying Plans To Defeat The Democrats In The Coming State Elections.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—"Kentucky in the Republican column," is the optimistic opinion of Richard P. Ernst, Chairman of the Republican State Committee of Kentucky. Mr. Ernst has been here for several days trying to enlist Mr. Roosevelt's support in the coming State elections. The Republicans of the Bluegrass State hold their convention on June 19th and from reports they have been bringing to the White House, it is evident that they believe strongly that success will perch on the Republican banners this fall. They seem to think that the enforced retirement of Senator Blackburn and the defeat of Senator McCleary by Governor Beckham have disrupted the Democratic party so badly in the State that its defeat is almost certain. There is an added reason why the Kentucky State Convention is being regarded here with intense interest. This is found in the fact that the Convention will be the first of its kind this year and that whatever action it may take toward endorsing the Republican candidate for President will go a long way toward shaping future policies, especially so since the leaders of the party in Kentucky have been in such close touch with President Roosevelt. Vice President Fairbanks, Secretary of War Taft, and other Presidential possibilities are focusing their entire attention on the coming political gathering.

Although Congress passed at the last session an appropriation bill carrying approximately $87,000,000 for the improvement of the waterways of the country, the national sentiment in favor of rapidly and scientifically developing these channels of trade has grown so remarkably that a number of States have made specific appropriations to hasten the work. Word has just been received here that Oregon has appropriated $300,000 to aid the Federal government in acquiring the locks and canals at Oregon City, with a view of making the Willamette River absolutely free to commerce. These Western States realize that money paid out in this way is a direct investment that will return immediate interest in the shape of reduced freight rates. In addition, every citizen shares in the benefit derived from this cheapened transportation, for it affects primarily the price of necessities of life. Grain growers are enabled to market their products at a much more reasonable rate, thus enabling the baker to increase the size of his loaf or decrease its cost. The same condition extends to all lines of production, and thus the initial benefits of reduced transportation tolls are multiplied, and effect all classes of people. At the Convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress held in this city in December, the state of Oregon sent ten delegates headed by Governor Chamberlain, to work with the organization to the end that the federal government should provide an annual appropriation of $500,000,000 for the national work of development. This national organization is continuing its efforts along this line, and at the present time is seeking to increase its membership so that it may exert even greater influence with the Sixtieth Congress.

Former Senator Blackburn is to assume his duties as a member of the Isthmian Canal Commission about April 1st. He will not remain in Washington it is said, but will go immediately to the Isthmus where he will become thoroughly familiar with the work from personal observation and investigation. He had a long interview with Secretary Taft this week in which the two mapped out many plans and policies to be followed in the future work on the great undertaking.

All Washington, irrespective of politics or creed, has turned its eyes toward the White House, where Archie Roosevelt, third son of the President is seriously ill with diphtheria. At one time serious doubts of his recovery were entertained, but he rallied, and unless the unforeseen happens he will be up and about within a comparatively short time. As soon as he is able to travel it is expected that Mrs. Roosevelt will accompany the youthful invalid to Pine Knot, the President's Virginia home, although there is some question as to whether he will be taken there or to the Homestead Hotel at Hot Springs, farther up in the mountains of the State, where both can take advantage of the mineral baths. Mrs. Roosevelt has watched unceasingly at her son's bedside and is much run down in consequence.

Another stamp has been added to those already authorized in commemoration of the Jamestown Exposition. It is of a five-cent denomination and will bear a likeness of the head of Washington. Eight million of them are to be issued to supply the demand for foreign postage. A vignette of Captain John Smith in green is to decorate the one-cent stamp, of which ten million are being printed, while the fourteen million issue of the two-cent stamps will have a descriptive scene, "The Founding of Jamestown," pictured in red.

Cowan, of Pittsburgh, special agent for the Carnegie Hero Fund.

The Woman
Or the Car

By Elliot Walker

Copyright, 1906, by Homer Sprague

Ladd, the proprietor of the Tamarack, shook his head with discouraging firmness.

"No," he declared decidedly. "I accommodate people here, not automobiles. First, no shelter for the machine; second, I won't have one round since my dog was run over; third, there's no use of talking. Better go along."

In the sudden darkness of the summer twilight came a blinding flash, disclosing more clearly the occupants of the big touring car—the chauffeur, gesticulating angrily; two other scowling men, a woman and a child.

With a rush of wind the storm broke. A deafening thunderclap shook the earth. The rain, almost horizontal in the dying air, drove a deluge of great drops under the hastily arranged covers.

"I'm going to get out!" shrieked a small scared voice. "I want to be in a house! Mamma, come!"

A tall figure leaped from the piazza of the little hotel, shoved Ladd aside and held out a pair of shirt-sleeved arms.

"You shall, baby!" he shouted. "It's a confounded shame! You, too, mamma! Let the men take care of themselves. Hurry, or you'll be drenched!"

"Look out!" cried the mother sharply, for the child had jumped recklessly. "Thank you, sir. I feared she would fall. Yes, I think it is best. I'll be right in."

She fumbled for a bag, spoke rapidly to one of her companions and sprang from the step unassisted to run up the short path after the uncoated figure, striding swiftly, with the little girl clinging to his neck.

Ladd's loud voice came to her ears above the din.

"You're all welcome, I say. I'll bed and feed the crowd, but that pesky machine can't lodge at my place. No, gentis. Sorry, but I've sworn to pass 'em along."

"A fine specimen you are to run a hotel," scolded the man by the driver. "It's my house," retorted Ladd.

"Well, keep it and be hanged! I wouldn't put my head under such a roof. We'll be here in the morning, old curnudgeon. Take care of Mrs. Dixon. Push her along, Henri. Never mind speed limits."

A few rattles, a dozen snorting gasps and the car dashed away through the mud.

Mr. Ladd, bareheaded and dripping, gazed after it with a satisfied grin.

"Too bad to break up a party," he grunted. "This storm will last a good hour. They'll get a nice twenty mile trip to Jopworth, spilling soft dirt. Well, I've got two guests, anyhow, and tomorrow I make my third pick on old Hank's tombstone."

He chuckled his way into the barn.

Lois Dixon sat in the dining room, a small apartment largely given over to social usage other than the delights of the table. A high chair had been found for Dot, who was assaulting bread and milk. Seraph Ladd, corpulent and apologetic, talked from the adjacent kitchen.

"Oh, no, my dear," she was saying. "The Tamarack isn't much of a hotel. Folks stay here for meals, and we take in a few transients and occasionally a regular. The regulars are mostly men who come to fish and kill time. There are good trout in the tamarack swamp brook, but it's a pesky hole. That man you saw is a regular. He has been here a week."

"I can hardly say I saw him. Everything was done so quickly. I'm quite dry now, and so is Dot. Your husband doesn't appear to approve of automobiles," this last sentence with an aggrieved intonation.

"He doesn't!" exclaimed Mrs. Ladd rather warily. "Jason is good natured about most other things, but after our dog was knocked across the fence (poor old thing; he was only gnawing a bone in the road) Jason swore an oath never to let a car stop overnight again. So he boarded up the shed. My, the way some of these people whiz along a country road is fearful! Your supper is most ready, Mrs. Dixon. I take it you are a widow woman, because—"

"Yes, I've been widowed for five years," Lois interrupted. "We were simply taking a short pleasure drive. A slight accident delayed us for an hour, else we should be at home by this time. We were making for Jopworth, where I have a sister."

"I see," Mrs. Ladd began to place dishes. "I sort of wondered."

"A friend of mine and his brother, besides the chauffeur," explained Lois, blushing a trifle. "It did seem queer that I was left so unceremoniously to the care of strangers, but I can look out for myself, and I always go prepared for emergencies. Still I should have thought—"

"Oh, it's the machine every time," laughed the old woman. "Men seem to forget. What with their wrangling and hurry for cover, you and Dot were better off of it."

"Apparently," Mrs. Dixon's tone was sarcastic. "However, to let me come in unattended and to leave all explanation to me when he knew I was upset and trying to calm Dot!" She paused. Seraph was cying her shrilly.

"Considerate, I must say," observed the hostess. "Well, draw up and eat."

"Mercy! You have cooked enough for three!" Lois laughed outright.

"It's not all for you, my dear. Our regular hasn't had his supper. He turned up only a few minutes before you did. I'll think the bell for him. You don't mind company, do you? He's a real nice man, but sort of quiet this trip. Acts sort of impatient and nervous, too, which isn't his usual way."

"I must ask you to introduce me, then. I'll be glad to thank him for helping us."

The bell rang softly in the hall. Lois, busying herself with her napkin and with Dot, did not glance at the entering figure.

Mrs. Ladd, impressed by the importance of the act of introduction, spoke up smartly.

"Nat, let me make you acquainted with Mrs. Blakeley—I mean Mrs. Dixon. Mr. Blakeley, Mrs. Dixon. This is her little girl. Dear, dear! Wasn't it funny that I should have got you twisted?"

"Very funny," murmured Blakeley, bowing and making considerable noise with his chair. Lois dropped her napkin. Dot stared, smiling and nodding.

"Now I've embarrassed you!" cried Mrs. Ladd, retreating to the kitchen. "Gracious!" she exclaimed to herself. "Neither of them can find a word to say. I guess I'll shut this door or they may hear me giggle."

The silence was broken by Dot. "You've got whiskers," she remarked, with complacency. "That's why! Didn't you know me?"

"No," said the man thickly. "Thadn't my glasses on. I recognized no one. I put that wrap over your head, dumped you in a chair and called Mrs. Ladd. I didn't know you, dear!"

"And you've put on a coat," went on his inquisitor, surveying him affectionately. "I liked you better with just a mustache. It seems ever so long since you came to see mamma."

"Hush, Dot," said her mother softly. "But he used to bring me candy," persisted the child. "Mr. Barker doesn't like Mr. Blakeley best. Don't you?" Lois' cheeks crimsoned.

"It's bedtime, dear. Mrs. Ladd will take you to the room. I'll be in a minute. Be a good girl and run out to the kitchen for her."

Dot tiptoed to Blakeley's chair. "Good night," she said coily and put up her lips.

The man kissed her tenderly, with a great lump in his throat. He had hoped for many good night caresses from this little one, but that hope no longer existed. As she disappeared he gazed steadily at the woman opposite.

"Let us have it over, Lois," he blurted. "I heard the news a month ago. Believe me, my dear, I shall try to think only of your happiness. Barker will be a very happy man."

"Not with me, Nat."

"What! Do you mean?"

"I mean that I do not intend to become Mrs. Barker. I have not yet given him my answer. He will get it tomorrow when he returns with his automobile. You have been misinformed."

Her eyes shone into his as he strained forward, eager, transformed with a sudden joy.

"Lois!" he cried. "Oh, my love, tell me, is there a chance for—yes, yes, you are crying, dear!"

"My introduction wasn't so far wrong, after all, Jason!" beamed Seraph Ladd the next day. "I wonder what Mrs. Dixon thought when I called him 'Nat,' so familiar? She says she will be Mrs. Blakeley the next time I see her."

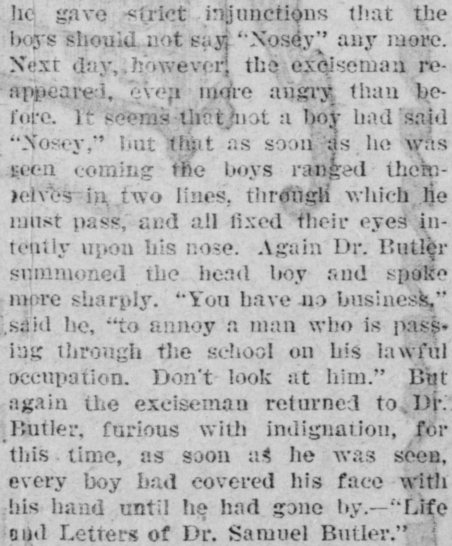

The Ownership of a Patent.

Suppose that a prior patent is infringed and no way is seen to avoid infringement by changing the product or the process or the machine so as not to embody the principle of a patented invention. The simplest way, of course, would be to buy the patent. If the patent cannot be bought, but a fraction of the patent can be obtained, no matter how small a fraction—say one-tenth of the entire right in the patent—the owner of the one-tenth would be just as well off as the owner of the nine-tenths. The courts have held that a patent is not like the capital stock of a corporation and that the owner of more than one-half of the title to the patent has no claim upon the owner of less than one-half. Each is at liberty to do with his portion what he pleases and cannot be made to account to the other. The owner of one-tenth may make ten times as much out of the patent as the owner of nine-tenths, because of his greater business ability or greater capital or for other similar reasons, and it would not be equitable to make him turn over nine-tenths of his profits to the other owner—Edwin J. Prindle in Engineering Magazine.

His Great Nose.

There was a certain excise-man in Shrewsbury who was very trim and neat in his attire, but who had a bottle nose of more than usual size. As he passed through the school lane the boys used to call him "Nosey," and this made him so angry that he complained to Dr. Butler, who sympathized and sent for the head boy, to whom he gave strict injunctions that the boys should not say "Nosey" any more. Next day, however, the excise-man reappeared, even more angry than before. It seems that not a boy had said "Nosey," but that as soon as he was seen coming the boys ranged themselves in two lines, through which he must pass, and all fixed their eyes intently upon his nose. Again Dr. Butler summoned the head boy and spoke more sharply. "You have no business," said he, "to annoy a man who is passing through the school on his lawful occupation. Don't look at him." But again the excise-man returned to Dr. Butler, furious with indignation, for this time, as soon as he was seen, every boy had covered his face with his hand until he had gone by.—"Life and Letters of Dr. Samuel Butler."

The Department of Agriculture has announced that the average yield of wheat in the United States is 12 bushels per acre. Bourbon Circuit Court.

The Bourbon Circuit Court convened Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock for the resumption of jury trials. After motion hour, in which judgment was taken for $433.23, with interest, in the case of N. C. Fisher, guardian of Nannie W. Clay vs. Lavinia Cunningham, Judge Stout called the case of Edward Woods' Executor vs. Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company. Both sides answered ready and the case entered into. The plaintiff was represented by Judge Denis Dundon and R. C. Talbott, and the defendant by Hon. E. M. Dickson. The suit is to recover damages to the amount of $25,000. After arguments by the respective attorneys the jury retired, returning in about fifteen minutes with a verdict for the defendant.

Judge Stout handed down his opinion yesterday morning in the injunction suit of John C. Clay vs. W. B. Woodford in regard to a line fence. He granted the injunction preventing Mr. Woodford from building a fence upon the line claimed by him. The injunction was made perpetual.

The next jury case called was Lucy B. Thomas vs. Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. The amount in controversy is $1,000. The policy is on the life of the husband of the plaintiff, who committed suicide some time ago by taking carbolic acid, which the company claims made the policy void. The jury was selected yesterday afternoon and the trial entered into. There are about forty witnesses and it is doubtful if they get through with the case today.

GRAND JURY REPORT.

The Grand Jury filed into the Court room about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon and after making the following report was finally adjourned by the Court:

BOURBON CIRCUIT COURT.

Grand Jury Room, March 21, 1907.

To Hon. Robt. L. Stout, Circuit Judge: May It Please Your Honor:—This Grand Jury has done its duty as best it knew. We have found indictments where in our opinion the evidence justified. Upon inquiry we found the County Infirmary in good condition and well kept. The jail is as well kept as it possibly can be its condition considered.

This Grand Jury investigated a charge of knowingly sending threatening letters to another against Mrs. A. P. Shropshire—we have refrained from indicting this lady as we are informed she is now under bond to keep the peace toward all good citizens and has not troubled any one since the charge was made against her. To direct a prosecution against a lady is a hard thing to do—we therefore do not indict but ask that the charge against her be referred to the next Grand Jury with the suggestion that she be not indicted so long as she lives at peace with her neighbors and does not violate the term other bond to keep the peace.

From the statements of witnesses to us we learn that there are a number of civil cases on the docket of this court which ought to have been off the docket some of them long ago. The constant recalling of these cases each succeeding term of court, consumes time and is consequently an expense to the taxpayers. Lawyers engaged in these cases should bestir themselves and rid the docket of every case that should no longer be there—any other course is unfair and unjust to their clients and the taxpaying public.

We have done our best to find and indict all vagrants in obedience to your Honor's charge, but evidence was lacking—we would suggest that the peace officers of the county (now that the busy season has come) be on the watch for persons who idle about and refuse to engage in some honest work for a livelihood so that the next Grand Jury may rid our community of all such characters. Having completed our labors we submit this, our final report, and beg to be now finally discharged.

GEO. W. WYATT, Foreman.

The jury also filed six indictments for minor offenses, the only one of importance being against the Intercontinental Harvester Company, of Wisconsin, for conspiring in restraint of trade.

Girlhood and Scott's Emulsion are linked together.

The girl who takes Scott's Emulsion has plenty of rich, red blood; she is plump, active and energetic.

The reason is that at a period when a girl's digestion is weak, Scott's Emulsion provides her with powerful nourishment in easily digested form.

It is a food that builds and keeps up a girl's strength.

Attention, Butter Makers.

Attention of butter makers is called to the following ruling of the U. S. Pure Food Commission effecting the making of butter:

"Housewives must work out the buttermilk if they want to put their butter on the market. A national law recently enacted classifies as adulterated all butter that contains 16 per cent or more moisture. The law will be enforced by agents of the general Government sent out under the direction of the agricultural department. Recently agents were out and took samples of creamery and country butter which is claimed to be within the law. The foreign substance in the butter is a moisture known as buttermilk. The agents state that there is but little butter sold by farmers that has less than 18 per cent of this moisture in it. If the law should be literally enforced it would work a revolution in the butter trade.

Presidential Talk.

A new Richmond is in the field for the Democratic nomination for President, according to newspaper reports from New York, in the person of Jesse Grant, of New York, the youngest son of Ulysses S. Grant. It is said the movement in his favor started some months ago, but is only just now given out. It is said that Wm. R. Hurst is backing the Grant movement with a view of embarrassing Wm. J. Bryan, but if the other States are like Kentucky, we do not believe that Mr. Bryan would be subjected to any embarrassment.

A Horse And Mule Center.

Hardin county has maintained her reputation again this season as a horse and mule market, says the Elizabethtown News. During the months of December, January and February, which embraces the main part of the Southern mule market, there were shipped South from this place about sixty car loads of mules and horses. The cars ranged from twenty-four to thirty head each, which means from 1,500 to 1,800 mules and horses went to the Southern market from this place alone. On an average of $150 each, which is a safe estimate the total value of these shipments was something like $250,000.

The Presidential election is approaching. "Times have changed." That is all. Mr. Wattersrn is a Democrat, and has always been a Democrat, never a Republican. Essential differences out of the way, Democrats are getting together. The Courier-Journal is going to support the ticket. And there you have it.

Stuck.

A small boy at Richmond, says the Register, called in the other day to view his new born baby brother. He looked it over with dissatisfaction, and finally asked: "Mamma, where did this thing come from?" "An angel brought it Jimmie." "Wuz you awake when he came?" "Certainly Jimmie." "Well, then, mamma, all that I have got to say, is that you are dead easy. I'd like to see any old angel put off such a looking thing on me. But I reckon we are stuck, unless I kin work Johnny Green to trade it sight-unseen for one of his spotted pups."

Total Number of Dead 1,200.

Efforts to recover the bodies of those killed by an explosion on board the French battleship Iena near Toulon, Tuesday, have not yet resulted in definitely fixing the number of casualties. There are still unaccounted for forty-eight officers and ten men, and there is little doubt that all missing have perished. It is feared the total number of dead will reach 1,200. In this belief the naval hospital was instructed to prepare mortuary space for that number.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

A Formidable Racing Stable.

Woodford Clay, of this county, whose stable always attracts attention in the East or West wherever he races has succeeded in securing the names for a few of his two-year-olds and the list is as follows:

Running Star, ch. f. by imp. Star Shoot, dam Wincome.
Something Doing, ch. f. by Sir Dixon, dam Much Ado.
Mary Water, b. f. by imp. Bridge Water, dam M. S. Mary.
Goddard, b. c. by Bridgewater, dam Oinda.
Nimbus, b. c. by imp. Star Shoot, dam Lady Elite.

Running Star is a sister to Paris, the winner of the Cincinnati Trophy, and to Winsome Waves, a good and consistent winner. Goddard is a brother to Harvey Wilson, and the dam of Nimbus was one of the best of the best race mares on the turf during her days. With Kentucky Beau, Hard Shot and Orange and Blue to represent the older division the Clay stable looks to be a formidable one.

Derivation Of "Easter."

Like many another term in Christian nomenclature, the word "Easter" is derived from pagan sources. The Saxon goddess of light, "Eastre," was honored with annual festival at the vernal equinox. The Jewish passover was also regulated by the March moon and the resurrection of Jesus occurred at this season. In later centuries the great Christian festival came to bear pagan name "Easter" and to be celebrated at a time co-incidental with the Jewish feast.

Look Out For Him.

Papers throughout the State are telling of a shrewd swindler who is victimizing the people, and Bourbon county residents are hereby given warning to be on the lookout. The man sell an inferior grade of bed springs. He enters a home and asks permission to examine the feather beds. With his knife he rips open the tick and thrusts in his hand and brings forth a handful of feathers, mixed with bugs which he had taken from his pocket. These he exhibits to the astonished household. In these homes, it is alleged, he placed springs for $10 that could have purchased for $4.50, taking the bug infested feathers in exchange for the springs.

Big Strike Predicted.

Thirty thousand of the $5,000 railway trainmen employed on the forty-nine railway systems west of Chicago are declared to have decided in favor of a strike unless their demands for an increase in wages and decrease in hours are granted unconditionally by railway managers in Chicago this week.

Democratic Ideas Vindicated By Time.

William Jennings Bryan was the guest Friday of the Democratic State Committee of Massachusetts, at Boston, and at a banquet delivered an address in which he touched upon various points of Democratic doctrine which, he declared, had been vindicated during recent events. The dinner followed a reception at which some 200 Democrats were introduced to Mr. Bryan.

Mr. Bryan was given a great demonstration, all those present standing and cheering repeatedly. State Democratic Chairman Feeney introduced him as the "foremost figure in American statesmanship" and expressed his doubts of any office which Mr. Bryan might hold would make him any dearer to the American people.

"I think," asserted Mr. Bryan, "that if we had had a vote unpurchased and untainted in 1906, I would have been elected by an overwhelming majority. We had against us the largest corporation fund that was ever used in a campaign."

"No one rejoices more than I in the vindication that has come to Democratic ideas. And I rejoice so much that I never lose an opportunity to thank the President for what he has done. I want no men in the community to anticipate me in hearty commendation of anything he does that I believe is right. I do not know what the President's attitude will be in the coming campaign, but it is certain that he cannot take back what he has said about our ideas. "Ten years ago they called our ideas insanity, yet on no question that we ever discussed have we been more vindicated than on our idea that more money would make higher prices and better times."

Mr. Bryan charged that the slump in stocks was caused by the very men who are now complaining.

"If I may venture a prediction," he added, "I would say that in the fight that is coming the Democratic party will be looked upon as the protector of the small investor against the sharks that have obtained power in Wall street."

Mr. Bryan was given a second ovation when he concluded his address.

Warship Too Big.

According to the London Chronicle the official accounts of the Dreadnought's behavior on her trip to Trinidad are not altogether supported by private letters.

The engines worked well, but the heat in the engine room exceeded anything ever experienced by those on board. Owing to the great size of the ship her maneuvering qualities at slow speed were not equal to those of smaller ships. It is stated that the big battleship cannot keep her station with reciprocating ships at 20 knots, and that for night maneuvering without lights in close formation the ship is out of the running.

Negro Gets The Place.

Allan Leroy Locke, colored, of Philadelphia, who will graduate from Harvard University in June, has been awarded the Rhodes scholarship at Oxford University, which this year was allotted to the State of Pennsylvania. The selection was made by the committee headed by Provost Harrison, of the University of Pennsylvania. Locke was chosen over four other candidates.

Another Prophecy.

And now comes that Western Kentucky fellow who says that we are to have a four inch snow on the 30th inst., followed by an all-day sleet on Easter. But this prophecy won't prevent the average woman from planning her Easter hat even if she doesn't wear it.

Kentucky Stands Fourth.

The State of Kentucky, with a total of $24,469,084, was the fourth State in the Union last year in the amount of internal revenue paid into the United States Treasury, according to the report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, just received.

Senator McCreary's Prediction.

According to the political prediction of United States Senator James B. McCreary, made in an interview at Lexington Wednesday night, Roosevelt and Fairbanks will be the choice of the Republicans for President and Vice President in the next Presidential campaign. Of course Senator McCreary, who is a Bryan Democrat, was not making an official announcement for the G. O. P., but this is the way, as he sees it, that the straws show the political wind to be blowing.

Substantial Increase in Salaries

Carriers in the rural free delivery service in Kentucky will profit by an order issued Wednesday by the First Assistant Postmaster General which will carry into effect the recent act of Congress providing for a substantial increase in their salaries. The chief beneficiaries of the new law will be those serving the longer routes upon which the greater hardships of the service fall.

The Wrestling Match.

In a catch-as-catch can, best two out of three wrestling bouts between Harry Stewart, of Cincinnati, and Young Pardello, of this city, Monday night, the former came out victorious in one of the fastest wrestling bouts ever witnessed here.

Stewart secured a strong scissors lock backed up with a half Nelson and won the first bout in twenty minutes and ten seconds. In the second bout Stewart finally secured opportune toe hold and gradually forced Pardello to the mat.

Both men, much fatigued, stepped to the front of the stage, Stewart saying Pardello was the best man he ever tackled.

A preliminary took place between Sam Young, a professional wrestler of Toledo, Ohio, and Fred Link, of this city. Link, with his six feet and 190 pounds, was too much for the Ohioan, who tips the beam at 138 pounds, and after a scrappy bout of ten minutes, the former gained a fall and was declared the winner.

Young Pardello has been challenged again by Nick Collins, of Detroit, Mich.
